Simon Webbe

I know you've been hurting
There's a shadow cast around your heart
Now there's one less diamond in the stars
And it's a crime
For one as beautiful as you
To be standing solo in the rain
To be choking back the tears again

I'd ride all of the King's horses
And I'd call the three wise men
I'd give all my religion
Just to see you smile again

'Cause every time you wake up
And every time you break up
I'll be waiting
And I'll put you back together again

'Cause every body falls down
So if you want a shout-out
I'll be waiting
And I'll put you back together again, again

It's cold on the outside
When the words of hate rain down on you
Listen to that voice inside of you
And you'll be fine
You're so beautiful to me
You're the one thing I'll be waiting for
When the sun breaks through the clouds once more

Climb aboard these white horses
Close your eyes and count to ten
Somewhere across the mountain
I can hear your laugh again

'Cause every time you wake up
And every time you break up
I'll be waiting
And I'll put you back together again

'Cause every body falls down
So if you want a shout-out
I'll be waiting
And I'll put you back together again

I'd ride all of the King's horses
And I'd call the three wise men
Somewhere across the mountain
I can hear your laugh again

'Cause every time you wake up
And every time you break up
I'll be waiting

'Cause every body falls down
So if you want a shout-out

I'll be waiting
And I'll put you back together again

Put you back together
Put you back together again
