The Ghost In You

Siouxsie and the Banshees

You awoke in a burning paperhouse From the infinite fields
Of dreamless sleep
You return to Tiananmen
An eyewitness in a shroud
To see them fall, feel them yield
Relieving the terror of the crowd

Hold the whirlwind, don't let it blow Just for a moment, I seemed to know Hold the whirlwind, don't let it blow I seemed to know the ghost in you

The whisper of your scream
Sighed through the air
And faith - the flag is torn and frayed
Inferno heat, glory in flame
Love was beaten and betrayed

In every step I hear your sobbing Dare I break the shade with one caress? Dare I trespass to lift the veil To touch the lips so soft and frail?

Hold the whirlwind, don't let it blow I seemed to know the ghost in you

Your captive heart, the belief you share With a kiss eternal, the spirits of the square

Hold the whirlwind, don't let it blow Hope remains with the ghost in you Hold the whirlwind, don't let it blow I seemed to know the ghost in you

Don't let it blow The ghost in you The ghost in you
