

The Bells That Broke My Heart

Slim Whitman

Though I watched you with the smile
As you started down the aisle
I was listening to the bells that broke my heart
They were ringing out the joy of a lucky girl and boy
But for me they were the bells that broke my heart
For they told me I have lost you now forever
And I hoped and prayed we'd made just one more start

And I saw what might have been from the outside looking in
As I listen to the bells that broke my heart
For I knew that I could never love another
And they told me that forever we must part
Still my eyes are filled with tears
And I know down through the years
I'll be listening to the bells that broke my heart
