

The Lion's Share

Sloan

I'm sure you're aware that the lion's share
Is spread out a little too thin
Do you think that passing you by
A critical eye wouldn't bet on their odds to win
If you think that I'm wrong put it in a song
Maybe you've waited to pounce

Hey that's that familiar refrain
The well terrain
They'd be lucky to have just an ounce

With the light in your eyes to compare
While they're trying to play your part
Do you wait in the winds to repair
Are you tryna disguise your heart

Save your spot, oh, Camelot
Who's managing your affairs
Can you on the foreign rates
'Cause sightings are exceedingly fair
You should come out and play
Before your audience pays

To put you behind the bars
Know that I exaggerate, we'd be fools not to wait
We can count on a shooting star

With the light in your eyes to compare
While they're trying to play your part
Do you wait in the winds to repair
Are you tryna disguise your heart

Ooh, pride or patience
Why did you wait so long?

All the light in your eyes to compare
While they're trying to play your part
Do you wait in the winds to repair
Are you tryna disguise your heart

All the light in your eyes to compare
While they're trying to play your part
Do you wait in the winds to repair
Are you tryna disguise your heart
