

Canvas

Soen

I have discovered a canvas, behind its colors I forged my cell Minions below release a dark glow and suddenly I see that everyone is blind but me

I have discovered a canvas deep in a sea of disharmony Cosmic embrace, a soulless portrait of endless synergy Visions of moving away from me

Concentrate don't lose your illusion; don't let them
provide the solution
Your fate in your hands Close your eyes from false shining lights made to confuse us all Architectures of domination, society they call

I have discovered a canvas Using its colors I saw myself Breaking the norm, induce a reform defying sanity bred in the care of my vanity.

See them entirely abstract out of the orbit we comprehend Careful recall deficit in all, deliberately recede crescent of our analogy

Concentrate don't lose your illusion; don't let them
provide the solution
Your fate in your hands
Close your eyes from false shining lights, made to
confuse us all
Architectures of domination, society they call

Call
Don't let them fall; you'll join them all Close your eyes from false shining lights You'll see them fall; you'll see them fall Architectures of domination.
