

Homesick

Solitary Experiments

What was my intention at this time; so many confused thoughts that brought me here Why did I leave all the ones I loved to cross old borders to break new ground

I tried it once again to find the right direction
That leads me straight back home, where I felt self-protection
With every step I make to reach the destination
I come closer to this place, where I found consolation

How can I ignore my origin; too many miles away from familiar
When will I regret the things I said; so many wasted years for nothingness

Here, here I stand alone again and watch the stars
To find my way back home!

I tried it once again to find the right direction
That leads me straight back home, where I felt self-
protection
With every step I make to reach the destination
I come closer to this place, where I found consolation

Here, here I stand alone again and watch the stars
To find my way back home!

Here, here I stand alone again and watch the stars

To find my way back home!