The Darkest Childe

Sophie B. Hawkins

(You can do it baby... you know you can do it baby) You were always the darkest childe Making all the grown ups sweat Driving both your parents to distraction With the sweetness in your head

You're the one who raped your superintendent On the rooftop tied his hands and feet to the fence You sucked his cock and fucked the man immobile You paid your daddy's rent

You are the darkest childe You spread your angel wings And fly through the night into the dreams of ancient ruins And make them sing

Lost lover shameless girl Bury me in your sultry curls I'm in the wilderness alone Let me kiss you until the dawn Let me put your wilde things on I've been howling in the fog so long

You are the darkest childe You have a sacred duty to perform upon this blessed Earth You must cradle those thoughts of the lustful lonely Inside your wicked warmth And you must Get off

You are the darkest childe And evil will never stop you And people will mock you and try To pop pop pop you into the market place where you cannot be bought Understood you will be missed There will be sadness For the darkest childe

So long

So long to the darkest childe Waiting in patient anguish For the scent of someone's wilderness To howl against the smog screen Of accolade smoothies Goose bump burgers and Christ-like fries How long can this world keep fucking itself up the ass Wonders never cease How long would it have to be Anyway

Long enough to cause hysteria Wide enough to cause great pain I am in the wilderness alone Let me kiss you until the dawn Let me put your wilde things on I've been howling in the fog so long
