I heard the stomping of feet dancing On the wooden floor upstairs I wasn't in the mood for laughing So I sat silent in my chair There was someone missing I knew Outside there fell the rain Where had she gone, what could I do I played the waiting game The cigarette smoke was annoying My mood was fit for a bath A drink couldn't oil my expression Nothing could make me laugh I was worried out of my head I was in such a state What's keeping her, where has she gone I played the waiting game

When you love someone You worry when they're late When you love someone You know the time it takes To play the waiting game

The music got louder and louder
From the wooden floor upstairs
I played with a handful of peanuts
When I saw her standing there
My mood leapt right out of the bath
She had got stuck in the rain
Her coat dripped on a hanger
Playing the waiting
I couldn't understand her
Playing the waiting
Seemed like I'd wait forever
Playing the waiting game
