

The Rain Will Fall

Barbra Streisand

You can tell one lie a thousand times
But that doesn't make it real
It's a thundercloud of alibis
That empty words cannot conceal

When up is down and wrong is right
In everything you do and say
The truth becomes a shelter when
The storm is on its way
Yes the storm is on its way

The rain is falling
As cold and dark as stone
The rain is falling
It chills us to the bone

The signs are all around us
The writings on the wall
But today the sky grows darker
And the rain will fall

We can build a wall to Heaven's gate
Make tomorrow yesterday
But our tears of rage will break it down
The storm is on its way

The rain is falling
As cold and dark as stone
The rain is falling
It chills us to the bone

Tomorrow we may wake up
And pray we dreamed it all
But today the sky grows darker
And the rain will fall

Facts are fake and friends are foes
And how the story ends nobody knows
Cruel is kind and lost is found
And the truth goes round and round and round and round

The rain is falling
As cold and dark as stone
The rain is falling
It chills us to the bone

One day we may be lifted
High up above it all
But today the sky grows darker
And the rain will fall
Yes the rain will fall
It's coming down, down, down
The rain will fall
The rain will fall
Yes the rain will fall
