Thin Line

Struggle Jennings

It's a thin line between right and wrong
Good and bad, dusk and dawn
It's a thin line between hate and love
Gates of Hell, Heaven above

It's a thin line between love and a achy breaky heart
A wildfire and a spark that lit your way when it was dark
Taking a bow to play your part, when it's been tearin' you apart
To stop before it starts, spinnin' tires to leave a mark
Embarkin' on a journey that could leave you on a gurney
Feel the pain of the burn to feed this fire that's been burnin'
To die inside a box or to live outside of their lines
To leave it all behind and fall in love with the grind

It's a thin line between Willie and the Lord
A Chevy or a Ford
Between your heart and mine, baby, it's a thin line
Between Elvis and Jesus
What we love and what pleases
It brings us to our knees, yeah, it's a thin line

Life and death is such a thin line
Sing my song and leave my last breath in a windchime
To live beyond this time
Made it from the bottom so my whole life is on incline
What's making it to the top if I can't see you from this ridgeline?
Lose it all to gain nothing when everything was inside
I got nine lives, can I get it right once out of ten times?
Work to make a living or am I living just to work?
Watching my loved ones get hurt just to love myself first

It's a thin line between right and wrong
Good and bad (Good and bad)
Dusk and dawn
It's a thin line between hate and love (Between hate and love)
Gates of Hell (Gates of Hell)
Heaven above (Heaven above)
