

Home (There Was Never Any Reason To Feel So Alone)

Sundara Karma

Hey pretty boy have you looked outside?
England lost the war to the rising tide
And the worst washed to shore
Dragged into the boots of another man
Told to be a king in a foreign land
Do they know?
Do they care?

It's all unwinding and breaking

Home, now you're far from sailing
Home, and you're far from knowing where to go
Home, now you're far from sailing
Home, and you're scared cause you know
There was never any reason to feel so alone

Brave enough to get through a blood bath day
Holding back the tears cause of what they say
She's absurd, he's confused
And they hold you to comfort your rights and wrongs
But you're asked to speak with your eyes cause they're safer than words

It's all unwinding and breaking

Home, now you're far from sailing
Home, and you're far from knowing where to go
Home, now you're far from sailing
Home, and you're scared cause you know
There was never any reason to feel so alone
There was never any reason to feel so alone

Home, now you're far from sailing
Home, and you're far from knowing where to go
Home, now you're far from sailing
Home, and you're scared cause you know
There was never any reason to feel so alone
There was never any reason to feel so alone
There was never any reason to feel so alone