

Trust in Yourself

Sylvan

Now things became vaguer, so daunting they seem
A rash of new data, must digest the reams

Finally, from inside what was cached comes to light

And after the vagueness a voice becomes clear:

Please, trust in yourself, for it will then define you!
You don't need someone else's help
And you know that it is true!

Though I became sager, still questions unsolved
In search of my nature I browse the unknown

Finally, from outside what's unbeknownst comes to light

And after the vagueness a voice becomes clear:

Please, trust in yourself, for it will then define you!
You don't need someone else's help
And you know that it is true!

And after the vagueness a voice becomes clear:

Please, trust in yourself, for it will then define you!
You don't need someone else's help
And you know that it is true!

Please, trust in yourself, for it will then define you!
You don't need someone else's help
And you know that it is true!