Eight Letters

Take That

We became the parade on the streets that we once cleaned Expendable soldiers smiling at anything Raised on a feeling our lives would have meaning eventually

We were once the answer and then you discover You're actually just one thing after another And what was the question and why was the lesson so deafening?

This is all that matters now
And that was all that happened anyhow
You can look back but don't stare
Maybe I can love you out of there

And when I went away what I forgot to say Was all I had to say:
Eight letters, three words, one meaning

And outside forces didn't make it easy
So I thought I'd go before you leave me
Self-preservation was no explanation for anything

But the truth is more than we'll ever comprehend I'm just starting to understand, my friend All of that distance, 'cause I fell in love with the enemy

This is all that matters now
And that was all that happened anyhow
You can look back but don't stare
Maybe I can love you out of there

And when I went away what I forgot to say Was all I had to say:
Eight letters, three words, one meaning

And when I went away what I forgot to say Was all I had to say: Eight letters, three words, one meaning

At last, we meet on no man's land Just footprints in the sand We meet on no man's land, at last

And when I went away what I forgot to say Was all I had to say:
Eight letters, three words, one meaning

And when I went away what I forgot to say Was all I had to say:
Eight letters, three words, one meaning

One meaning
Just one meaning
