

Basement

Taylor Acorn

I thought this was the part that I start walking uphill
So tell me why it's getting darker?
Thought this was the part of me that I killed
So how's it still pulling me under?

Oh and I've been here but it's different from before
Familiar place, but I can't find the door
It's coming into focus, might be the lowest
I didn't know it but

I guess rock bottom has a basement
Never thought it could get worse
Till I woke up on the pavement, facing
All the bridges that I ever burned
I've been tripping and falling and making my rounds
To the loneliest corners that I've ever found
No saving me now
I'm too far down, I'm too far down
I'm too far down

Starting to think lately maybe this is my fate
It kind of kills the point of trying
Would it be so bad if I stayed?
No, it's not worth the cost of climbing

Oh, and I've been here but I'm further now
The air is cold and the lights went out
I think I'm losing focus, this is the lowest
I didn't know it but

I guess rock bottom has a basement
Never thought it could get worse
Til I woke up on the pavement, facing
All the bridges that I ever burned
I've been tripping and falling and making my rounds
To the loneliest corners that I've ever found
No saving me now
I'm too far down, I'm too far down
I'm too far down

I thought this was the part where I start walking uphill
Uphill, uphill
I thought this was the part of me that I killed, I killed

I guess rock bottom has a basement (basement)
Never thought it could get worse
Til I woke up on the pavement, facing
All the bridges that I ever burned
I've been tripping and falling and making my rounds
To the loneliest corners that I've ever found
No saving me now
I'm too far down, I'm too far down
(Too far, too far, too far)
I'm too far down
(Too far, too far, too far)