

Tender

Tesseract

You said we were everything we needed to be
We held the key together
And we spoke tender words
All we needed was to breathe

You touched a part of me
You dream a lie
You said too much

Did you ever think a moment could mean this much?
You need to turn away
It's true, it's true that I hoped for the resolution
Did you ever think somebody could give this much?
And so I bleed for you

Did you ever see the path you left for me?
So I attacked you all, until another war began
And so I attacked you all, until my vision turned to black
My silence killed it all
No faith in love remains

We needed more time
Still so many things to say
Lost in time forever
Now so little time to find the gateway to each other

Still so many things to say
Still so many things to say
But no words could ever change
The ground beneath us caving in
Nothing will remain

Still so many things to say
Still no faith remains
It all ended here