

You're out to dinner celebrating
I'm home alone contemplating
Why I lost your love long ago
Am I wrong for not completely letting go?

It's been three years since we spoke
And how you're doing now, I don't know
But I still care and I probably always will
Am I wrong for not completely letting go?

I can't remember my mother's maiden name
Or where I'm parked when I'm searching in the rain
I woke this morning though and I knew that it was your birthday
Try as I may the little memories remain

Maybe you'll hear this, maybe you won't
Maybe you've already heard some of the songs that I wrote
They're all about you and I hope that you know
Am I wrong for not completely letting go?
Am I wrong for not completely letting go?
Am I wrong for not completely letting go?
I'm not wrong for not completely letting go
