The Birthday Massacre

Violet

The tragic comedy divine Paints the way to peace of mind Leaving shallow lovers far behind

Past uncertainties combine Bringing tears to sleepless eyes Memory runs the course of time

Blood runs cold beyond the violet prison For violent visions And so the broken record plays As you throw us away

We're never enough We're drowning in cliches So desperate to love We're twisting every word they say So we sleep through the days

Within the heat of passions war Lust is spilled upon the floor Staining red the wasted metaphor

The selfish need for something more Claws in vain at closing doors Scarring faces once adored

Tracing circles in the violet prison For violet visions And so the broken record plays As you throw us away

We're never enough We're drowning in cliches So desperate to love We're twisting every word they say So we sleep through the days