What's in your sight Is it light Or the darkest night Swirling around your head Are you dead Cause your skin's so white And I remember the words you said, to me You said that life can't always be, what you want it to be So you see The accidental tears in your empty tragedy Let it be And take this key, from me And rediscover the One Who set this fire in me (This is not the day) (For you to throw it all away) (The life you've got, is like the breath of God) (It's such a lovely thing to face) Tell me is it true That you Had been there too I've seen it all before And the door That your life went through It's in pieces on the floor And you find That the careless life has left your dreams all behind And its time To turn your life back to the forgiving love so kind Let it be And take this key, from me And rediscover the One Who set this fire in me (This is not the day) (For you to throw it all away) (The life you've got, is like the breath of God) (It's such a lovely thing to face) (Well it's not the Son) (That you run from) (So confront the one who put the loneliness in your heart) (The art, the missing part is your second start) (So let the Son rise in your ear) Well it's not, the Son That you, run from So confront, the one Who put the loneliness in your heart The art, the mi, ssing part Is your se, cond start To let the Son rise in your heart Let it be And take this key, from me And rediscover the One

Who set this fire in me
(This is not the day)
(For you to throw it all away)
(The life you've got, is like the breath of God)
(It's such a lovely thing to face)
