Understand It

The Franklin Electric

I don't understand what they are saying
I'm sick and tired trying to make it out
I've been busy all this time turning circles in my mind
Trying to figure it out
I don't know why, but lately I've been fading
As I walk around the neighborhoods that I know
Past the tower of my faith like I'm picking up the pace
I've been chasing someone that I used to know

And I, know I don't understand it anymore
And I, know I don't understand it anymore

It was thrown away like money and it cost you
You grew sick and tired of trying to make ends meet
You were focused on the wrong things
Barking up the wrong tree now
As you look back on the origin of your hope
But it's not always the way and you can change it
Taking chances on what you've been looking for Wish somebody else might tell you what we both already know
In a world where they all turn the other cheek

And I, know I don't understand it anymore
And I, know I don't understand it anymore
No, I can't understand anymore

Is it safe to say?

I don't understand the games you're playing
I'm sick and tired of trying to play along
Trying to make sense of the riddles I've been over upside down
Has anyone else figured it out?

I, know I don't understand it anymore
I, know I don't understand it anymore
No, I can't understand anymore
No, I don't understand anymore
