

I Will Be King

The Hoosiers

I will climb the hill
And I won't come down
I can see the world
And its turn has come for it to bow

I live for the day
I win the fight
Finally I get to choose what's wrong and what is right

I will be the king
And I will be in charge of everything
I have the right to reign
I never need your permission again
I hope you're on my side
Traitors cannot hide when I am king when I am king

When I take the throne you'll drop the knee
And ask yourself why you were not more loyal to me
When I take your head the world will see
All were wrong who doubted me and my sovereignty

I never gave consent
To the shackles in which I spent
Too long to ever cry surrender

Now the world must pay
For making me this way
Heavy's the head that wears the crown
