

Dynamite

The Lathums

If I could be anything, I'd choose to be strong
Not just in body but mind and heart, is that so wrong?
If it should be anything but us in the end
Then I'll know that I was weak, you're too good for me, my friend

If the sea should hold me
If the words command me
If the lights are blinding
When the world is frightening
I'll know it's you, dynamite

When you saw this wreckage of a heart that I call home
You came and you held it, you treated it like it was your own
Now all I'll want and all I'll gain and all I will ever find
Is your name imprinted in my heart and in my mind

If the sea should hold me
If the words command me
If the lights are blinding
When the world is frightening
I'll know it's you, dynamite

Finally you sauntered in
With nothing on your skin
A memory forgotten still
A life line back to land
If this is what it meant
Then I will understand
It hurts sometimes, I'll have you if I can

If the sea should hold me
If the words command me
If the lights are blinding
When the world is frightening
Well the sea won't hold me
And sky will not bind me
And the love won't throw me
For I'm already broken

And the love of you, dynamite
For the love of you, dynamite
Oh love, oh my dynamite