

Barstools

The Lowdown Drifters

Get you a leather jacket, a Telecaster guitar
Get you a pair of boots that already been worn
Then you get some Cash and get you some Hank
Last Dance With Mary Jane that people love to sing

And you sing to barstools
'Cause they all know the words
They stand up for the encore
And they all yell Freebird
And when the lights go down
You won't feel alone
'Cause there's always another song and another show
To sing you back home

Get you to the circuit, get you a band
Find friends and family you can call your fans
Get you a show then you take it on the road
Till everybody knows your name
And they want just a little more

And you sing to barstools
'Cause they all know the words
They stand up for the encore
And they all yell Freebird
And when the lights go down
You won't feel alone
'Cause there's always another song and another show
To sing you back home

Write a couple songs
And a record too
That can never mean to anyone
What it'll mean to you

But everyone knows the words
Everyone comes to dance
Make it out to each other's shows
Say there's still a chance

And you sing to barstools
'Cause they all know the words
They stand up for the encore
And they all yell Freebird
And when the lights go down
You won't feel alone
'Cause there's always another song and another show
To sing you back home
