

Confessions

The Marcus King Band

Lay awake every morning
Sun rises 'cross my bed
Find myself missing you
All them things we used to do
And the words I never said
All seems so familiar to me
Could it be
I was just alone when I had you
Didn't treat you right
I stayed out all night
And left you home worrying all alone

But jealousy runs through me
Seemed okay for me to stray away from you

Forgive me for I have sinned
Forgive me for how long it's been
I sing these words to you, over and over again
But this will be my last confession
This will be my last confession

Left you lonely so many times
'Cause in my mind I was only saving you from me
Now I wake up on a cold sweat, and my mind won't let Me forget the way things used to be
Now my whiskey's dry
The pain that I put you through is killing me inside

Thought if I could make you leave
Then you would see I ain't worth a damn anyway

Forgive me for I have sinned
Forgive me for how long it's been
I sing these words to you, over and over again
But this will be my last confession
This will be my last confession

Forgive me for I have sinned
Forgive me for how long it's been
I sing these words to you, over and over again
But this will be my last

Forgive me for I have sinned
Forgive me for how long it's been
I sing these words to you, over and over again
But this will be my last confession
This will be my last confession
