

New River

The Oh Hellos

It took forever and a day for the canyon's and coasts to erode away

By the weight of the ocean's cyclical motion they swayed

And though the eons may pass as slow as the sands of an hourglass

Every grain that we've counted claims that even the mountains can change

Let it come down, let it come down

Let it make in you a new river

Let it come down, let it come down

Let it make in you a new river

I know the winds from the south have the waves riled up like a hungry mouth

And your stomach goes hollow at the thought that it could swallow you whole

Well, it'll rain for forty days and nights, and nothing you do can slow the rising tides

But the river takes her shape from every tempest she abides

And like her, you'll be made new again

Let it come down, let it come down

Let it make in you a new river

Let it come down, let it come down

Let it make in you a new river

Let it come down, let it come down

Let it make in you a new river

Let it come down, let it come down

Let it make in you a new river

Let it come down, let it come down

Let it make in you a new river

Let it come down, let it come down

Let it make in you a new river
