

Silhouettes

The Rare Occasions

Gingerly our silhouettes walk parallel
Beneath a sea of desperate electric energy
And in spite of my greatest resistance
The feeling is marked with persistence
I'm drowning in your existence
Cascading about, we will soon figure out that we're Aimlessly pacing the streets just to be together

I'll write you a thunderstorm
So forlorn it echoes and
Shatters everything you fear
You're too dear to let go

Fervent clouds; through bleary eyes and weary minds we Think aloud as distant reflections pass us by
And with you, girl, my mind's in a clamor
Resonant words are but stammers
I think I just might be enamored
Its times like these that I notice the breeze is Drifting 'round like two souls drifting around tonight

Streetlights cut through the night mist
A light kiss: extinguish
The fire building inside me
Just guide me to your lips and

I'll write you a thunderstorm
So forlorn it echoes and
Shatters everything you fear
You're too dear to let go

If all of the earth were to disappear
I'd still be walking around with you here
Dreaming of darkness far away
Just relay your smile