The Refreshments

I see the lightning from the storm down in Mexico And I see my speedometer doesn't work I cross the desert and disappear into the tumbleweeds I tip the bottle and bite the lime

I hear the thunder from the storm down in Mexico And I leave the border far behind I feel the dust coat my teeth and turn my sweat to mud I tip the bottle and bite the lime

There ain't no moral to this story at all Anything I tell you very well could be a lie I've been away from the living, I don't need to be forgiven I'm just waiting for that cold black soul of mine To come alive

Well, I feel the wind blow from the storm down in Mexico Gasoline for another hundred miles I cross the river and leave my shoes up on the other side I tip the bottle and bite the lime

There ain't no moral to this story at all Anything I tell you very well could be a lie Been away from the living, I don't need to be forgiven I'm just waiting for that cold black, sun-cracked soul of mine To come alive

Come alive, yeah

Well, I feel the rain drops from the storm down in Mexico Truck will go no further, out of gas I walk through the desert past the lizard and a rattlesnake I tip the bottle and bite the lime

There ain't no moral to this story at all And anything I tell you very well could be a lie There ain't no morals to these stories at all And everything I tell you, you can bet will be a lie I been away from the living, I don't need to be forgiven I'm just waiting for that cold black, sun-cracked Numb-inside, soul of mine To come alive

Come alive Come alive Come alive
