

Same Time

The Script

Headphones in, I'm walking by the hotel bar on Fifth
Where we got drunk and had that argument
The one that meant we had nothing left
I'm a mess, I go to sleep with my phone on my chest
Just in case you send one more late-night text
The one that says, "Let's forgive and forget"

Somehow I know that you're thinking of me
In a half-made bed, waking up alone
When I open my eyes
Somehow I know that you're thinking of me
When it's 2 AM, I'm stumbling home
In the back of my mind
Somehow I know that you're thinking of me

At the same time
At the same time
At the same time
Somehow I know that you're thinking of me
At the same time
At the same time
At the same time

Can't catch my breath, I'm passing by the place where we first met
My heart feels like it's jumping from my chest
See these silhouettes of things we're regret

Somehow I know you'll be thinking of me
On your wedding day
Just before it starts
In the back of your heart
Somehow I know that you're thinking of me
If the years go by
But we've not moved on
That we're a million miles
Somehow I know that you're thinking of me

At the same time
At the same time
At the same time
Somehow I know that you're thinking of me
At the same time
At the same time
The same time

We'd be wonderin' all our lives
If we didn't make it right
Am I mad to think we'd have ever made it?
And no matter who I'm with
There's a part of me that's still, still in love
You don't know how to take it
'Cause somehow I know that you're thinking of me

When we're old and grey, and we've both moved on
It's the end of our lives
But somehow I know that you're thinking of me
Underneath the stars, in a lonely sky

Till the day I die
Somehow I know that you're thinking of me

At the same time
At the same time
At the same time
Somehow I know that you're thinking of me
At the same time
At the same time
