The Shivers

more than a little girl leaving more than two lovers deceiving more than a sad man grieving more than text message receiving more than a cold lonely ocean more than some far away notion more than a fading love potion oh, won't you pour me some more?

more than a chore
more than a wet floor more than before

and i go to the water to talk to your ghost and i raise up my glass in a lonesome toast

i do this more than most i do this more than i probably should more like a man than a woman and less like a couple of children more bold than more old than more happy than just hoping more love-making

more risk-taking
less heart-breaking
more real, less faking

and i drink with your ghost and i raise up my chalice in such a lonesome toast i love you more than most i love you more than i ever did before
