

Saturation

The Superjesus

color in the shade of winters tide I'm not waiting
diving down down
nothing left for stargazing tonight now I know your diving diving down into the sea faster than the chill that follows me black and white
through rust and powdered eyes
i'm not waiting
nothing to no one always old and always realise that your fading
nothing to no one you'll stay waiting for the rain and all that you knew was divided in two
if you run a thousand miles away you'll never see the day that longed to wait
the night we saturate
the stars will never shine again and now forever's running to the end to take you back again