Never forget

The Unseen

its the dead of night and she wakes up screaming but her terror doesn't end when she's done dreaming she recloses her eyes and all she sees is your face bringing her back to that time and that place when you forced your way into her front door you took all her possessions, still you wanted more grabbed her by the arms, forced her to the bed you left her body but you'll never leave her head never forget, never walk away pain, regret, till her dying day he was very young but he knew when to hide he didn't recognize the smell booze but could see it in your eyes he swore when he was older he'd get his revenge but he never got the chance cause you left when he was ten now he walks the street with hatred in his eyes a needle in his veins, a head so full of lies all his wounds have healed, scars still mark the flesh drugs numb the pain but he'll never forget how do you sleep at night? what gave you the right destroying people's lives only their pain will survive
