

This Changes Everything

The Zolas

Ten thousand years
And we're breaking up like this
Like the ice between the continents
We met at a beach fire, I devoured your every nature
But inside I know you'll never be enough for me

In the night before the war
Be the one that I adore
Flares of light crashing on our shores
Be the one that I adore

Years in the wild
And I can't break my need for wanting
The beauty that I'm designed for conquering
We were young and in love
I built you into religion
Now I mine your body and refine your blood
That's my generation

In the night before the war
Be the one that I adore
Flares of light crashing on our shores
Be the one who says, "No. No more."