

Hell Finds You Everywhere

Thousand Below

How far would you go for everyone that you love and you know
Trade away the comfort and your peace
Disappear slowly and you'll see they'll be happy for certain
You feel like a burden
They say that they need you but you'll give them a version
Of a world where the pain and the empty heart you hold
Can't hurt them anymore

If heaven exists then it's worlds away
You spend your life in a darker place
And you beg and you plead and you hope
But hell finds you everywhere

Enemy stuck at sea
Your thoughts come hitting like a hurricane
But you've been here before
It's your theatre of war
Enemy speak and sing
All of the love I'll never bring in your care
Cause hell finds you
Hell finds you everywhere

In the Garden of your mind, hatred grows
And dissonance calls your name
Like a siren's song pushing you along
Heaven's hiding barely out of frame
But hell embraces like a hurricane

I wanted this to be more, but they'll forget me
The graves we're digging deeper, I'm feeling emptier, emptier
I'm not leaving 'til you leave first, until you're resting
I thought it couldn't be worse, and now it's heavier, heavier

Enemy stuck at sea
Your thoughts come hitting like a hurricane
But you've been here before
It's your theatre of war
Enemy speak and sing
All of the love I'll never bring in your care
Cause hell finds you
Hell finds you everywhere

Hell finds you
Hell finds you everywhere
