

You Exist

Tommy Lefroy

Say something please
You're making me nervous
We're watching the gulls on your daily excursion
You can't believe, the sea wall erosion
We both know you mean, that we're not important

I guess, you're correct
And I am always reminded of it
I tried to contest
But I am too small for the argument

We're born blue, got used to it
'Till you came to keep me alive
I don't have a choice
But to leave the door
Cracked open when you are in sight
You're alright, you're alright, you're alright

They built and arc in the state of Kentucky
And you think it's funny
The effort they made to include the rocks
And the dinosaur bones are the things we were buying
But our fear of dying

I guess, she's obsessed
With getting enough antioxidants
Get her up, get her dressed
And give her a world she can marvel in

We're born blue, got used to it
'Till you came to keep me alive
I don't have a choice
But to leave the door
Cracked open when you are in sight

And I'm sorry for shaking your shoulders
When you said in the car what's the point of it all
And I don't have it in me to cause your divinity
Breathe for me, for me
Try

You're alright, you're alright, you're alright
You're alright, you're alright, you're alright
You're alright, you're alright, you're alright
You're alright, you're alright, you're alright
You're alright, you're alright, you're alright
You're alright, you're alright, you're alright
You're alright, you're alright, you're alright
