

Can You Feel the Love

Tristam

As I grew
From your supple hands
I could be a burden
But you'd understand
Though the child's gone
I'm still a mixed-up kid
Like I need you now
Like I never did

Life's got me tumbling down the stairs again
Unusually blue
I've been scratched up and bruised
Just as I'm asking for some help again
You already knew
I feel thrown out and used

There's nothing like your eyes to recognize my pain
Uncovering the lies, I told myself in vain
Nothing like your hand, so gentle with my heart
To hold me in my grief, to make me feel apart

I can feel the love right now
I can feel the love right now
I can feel the love right now
And the laughs and cries, that we'll take to the ground

Looking round to the ones I love
I can feel it slip, then the moments gone
Did I blink too fast, caught up in my ways
Someone take me back to those good old days

And now you tumbled down the stairs again
Unusually blue
You got scratched up and bruised
I see a shadow pass me by again
I already knew
You feel thrown out and used

You don't have to ask
I'll lift beneath the veil
Letting in some light
Remind you of the day
And if you want to hide
Afraid to face the sun
No matter I'll be there
And I'm not the only one

Can you feel the love right now
Can you feel the love right now
Can you feel the love right now
And the laughs and cries that we'll take to the ground

Can you feel the love right now
Can you feel the love right now
Can you feel the love right now
And the laughs and cries that we'll take to the ground
