

Distant (Reimagined)

True North

Your guard goes up when you feel like it's gonna rain
Staring at the ground cause you can't find the words to say
How you're feeling when you're dealing with it all
Point the finger down cause you can't find the one to blame

You look to the ground
You're filled with doubt
You hold it inside you

Daydreaming and you're back in that place again
And you're really just afraid to let it hurt so you choose to pretend
And you're seeing how you're dealing with it all
Point the finger down cause you can't find the one to blame

You look to the ground
You're filled with doubt
You hold it inside you
Instead of letting it out
And there's nowhere to turn for help
When you're fighting against yourself
Conflicted and broken
You feel like you're someone else

But you still hold on
You won't let go

You wear your heart on your sleeve
Your mind is like an open book
Tear out the pages you filled with fear
And rip them apart

You look to the ground
You're filled with doubt
You hold it inside you
Instead of letting it out
And there's nowhere to turn for help
There's nowhere to turn for help
You feel like you're someone else
