The Charismatic Smile

The suit was fitted pressed and laid out on the bed The folders stacked upon the shelf And every detail was immaculately cared for

A corporation of yourself And soon they'll all have their opinions And every expert has a voice

You've brought them here today Through charismatic speaking Without so much a pretense why

And when it's all laid out The tension has been broken Until a moment passes by

And now they all have their opinions And every expert has a voice And soon the room is filled with menial discussion Until you rise above the noise, rise above the noise

And that's when you smile and take control the room You smile, now they're staring at you Well you've raised the bar by playing rough But are your methods good enough To take the fools for everything they're worth