

Nobody's Everything

Tucker Beathard

She turns her head, so he don't see her cheeks turning red
Her hands shaking like leaves as she gives him his coffee, two sugars, half cafe with no cream
Waiting in line, he follows her around with his eyes
Catching the hint of a smile as he trips up and he falls and ca uses scene

A nobody found in another nobody to love
A no one realizing another no one is enough
A fade into the wallflower whose on is turned off
And the one who's left out when they close up the box
They find one another and feel what it feels like to be
Everyone's nothing and nobody's everything

She grabs a towel, trying like hell not to laugh out loud
Taking her time to work them stains out
And out of his mouth comes "your eyes are so blue"

A nobody found in another nobody to love
A no one realizing another no one is enough
A fade into the wallflower whose on is turned off
And the one who's left out when they close up the box
They find one another and feel what it feels like to be
Everyone's nothing and nobody's everything

And he turns to go
She says "I get off around", he says "I know"
And I'd sure like to see where this goes if you're up for it
And seeing whatever tomorrow might hold
For everyone's nothing and nobody's everything

Everyone's nothing and nobody's everything