

Same Page, Different Book

Tucker Beathard

If memories were lines written down on a page
The ones I'd read the most would be the ones we made
Before we close the book on me and you and the story we wrote
Got torn in two
I wonder if you're on another chapter with someone new

Or if you stop in your tracks when you hear my song
If your heart's got a runaway mind of its own
If you still feel it beating with a little break
We're on the same page, same page
If you think about the words that we left unsaid
Find yourself looking back more than looking ahead
If you would erase goodbye if you could
Then we're on the same page, but in a different book

If love is meant to be, let it go, and it'll find a way back
Until I can hold you again, I'm holding on to that
It takes all I got not to pick up the phone
'Cause if you picked up and you weren't alone
It would cut me to the bone
I want to know just as bad as I don't

If you stop in your tracks when you hear our song
If your heart's got a runaway mind of its own
If you still hear it beating with a little break
If you think about the words that we left unsaid
Find yourself looking back more than looking ahead
If you would erase goodbye if you could
Then we're on the same page
Yeah, but in a different book

If you stop in your tracks when you hear my name
If you love me like being [?] walked away
[?] never change
If you think about the words that we left unsaid
Find yourself looking back more than looking ahead
If you would erase goodbye if you could
Then we're on the same page but in a different book
Yeah, in a different book
