

Here in the half-light I exist
I never thought we'd come to this
Another day alone and broken
At every turn I see your face
No second chance, no saving grace
No time to voice words left unspoken

I break a little more each day
It's just the price I have to pay

We burned our bridges one by one
Lost our way and now you're gone
The void you left will last forever
You meant the world and more to me
Maybe it wasn't meant to be
I thought we'd always be together

I break a little more each day
Still lost and trying to find my way

This flame that burns inside of me
Won't let me rest won't let me be Supposing solace never came
To pacify and dull the pain
Here in the early morning light
Or in the deepest dead of night
Your ghost returns or so it seems
To haunt my days and crash my dreams

Take back the time you gave to me
I don't want those memories
Distant echo's call to me
The life we shared feels like a dream
But then again the pain is real
A pain so real it cuts right through me

I break a little more each day
It's just the price I have to pay

Here in the half-light I exist
Never thought we'd come to this
Another day alone and broken
I break a little more each day
It's just the price I have to pay

Still lost and trying to find my way
