Working alone, engaging the stone, our lives went flashing past

No time to think, it was through in a blink of an eye, With the outside world, watching on, living in silent hope,

Asking questions, theories tested, one of us sings our favourite song.

One way in, one way out, Pitch black darkness, darker than the night One way in, one way out, ...One way in...

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, locked inside the earth  $% \left( 1\right) =\left( 1\right) +\left( 1\right)$

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, before we'd see the sun again  $% \left( 1\right) =\left( 1\right) \left( 1\right) +\left( 1\right) \left( 1\right) \left( 1\right) +\left( 1\right) \left( 1\right)$

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, every minute lasts a lifetime

Three hundred and twenty-one hours....

Days slowly passed, no sound at all, locked inside a claustrophobic nightmare,

Hearing sounds from up above, scratching, knocking, moving slow,

Only a matter of time they said, only a matter of faith Plenty of that from inside and out, but not enough air to breathe...

One way in, one way out,
Pitch black darkness gives way to the light,
One way in, one way out,
Perilous journey, inching closer, moments at a time...

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, locked inside the earth  $% \left( 1\right) =\left( 1\right) \left( 1\right) +\left( 1\right) \left( 1\right) \left( 1\right) +\left( 1\right) \left( 1\right$

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, before we'd see the sun again

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, every minute lasts a lifetime

Three hundred and twenty-one hours....

'Til the outside world...
'Till the outside world...

'Til the outside world comes crashing in

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, locked inside the earth

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, before we'd see the sun again

Three hundred and twenty-one hours, every minute lasts a lifetime  $% \left( 1\right) =\left( 1\right) +\left( 1\right) +$

Three hundred and twenty-one hours....