

Daylight

Unkle Bob

The daylight doesn't feel right, doesn't touch you anymore
The boxes you've been ticking don't feel like boxes anymore
The memories you've been making feel like cuttings on the floor
The timeline you are faking is the one thing you adore
And who are you kidding? You always wanted more
It's not like you would find it in the places I abhor
Into his arms, so you will go
But if you want me let me know
I have been good, I misunderstood
What it would take to break the flow
Of your life
It's not like you can keep up an emotional disguise

The people all around you see the seasons in your eyes
You feel like you've been lying to yourself so much more
It's not like you are hiding in the classroom anymore
I hear that you're trying for another little child
If one didn't change you maybe two will see you right
I know that that's harsh
Into his arms, so you will go
But if you want me let me know
I have been good, I misunderstood
What it would take to break the flow
Of your life