

Turn Back Time

Van Canto

Sometimes I want to know:
Where am I to go?
The time will tell is what I've been told
I'm roaming evermore

Sometimes I want to know:
Where do I return?
Scenes of memories, they make me learn
That I've been here before
Not so long ago

If I could turn back time I wouldn't do
Still I'd cry, and even lie for you
If I could turn back time I wouldn't do
Forever I'll be coming home to you

Sometimes, when I feel weak
The one thing I keep
Is the certainty when I fall asleep
I am safe and not alone

Sometimes, when I feel weak
It's your voice I hear
Telling me I don't have to fear
Just being on my own
I am not alone

If I could turn back time I wouldn't do
Still I'd cry, and even lie for you
If I could turn back time I wouldn't do
Forever I'll be coming home to you

A dead silent thunder
When blind lightning strikes
Resounding endlessly
Awaiting the blunder
That's turning the tides
Defining destiny
A new kind of wonder
Just open your eyes
Embrace all that you see
No need to turn back time
I will return home to you

If I could turn back time I wouldn't do
Still I'd cry, and even lie for you
If I could turn back time I wouldn't do
Forever I'll be coming home to you

If I could turn back time I wouldn't do
Still I'd cry, and even lie for you
If I could turn back time I wouldn't do
Forever I'll be coming home to you

Forever I'll be coming home to you
