

If these walls could talk
And these lights go any lower
Would you have the power to lay it all on the line
Leave it all on the floor and go break a leg?
There must be something in those subtleties
There's something darker in your mind
There's something built inside to pacify
There must be darker things at play

If these letters could talk to you
And my temper get much shorter
Would I have to power to lay it all on the line
Leave it all on the floor and go break a leg?

There's something special in your mindset that sets you apart
There's something colorful inside
You speak of peace & the future like you've been there before
Why would you act so cold?

There must be something in those subtleties
There's something darker in your mind
There's something built inside to pacify
There must be darker things at play

Where do you stand?
Right before me you left me alone again
Where do you stand?
Where do you stand?
