

E.D.A

Varials

You learn a lot about darkness staring at the sun
You learn a lot about company when the love is gone
I don't see the power, I just hear the call to greatness
But you wouldn't understand, looking at me from the outside

This anger, it lives inside of me
You can feel it when I speak truth and even when my teeth show
No taste when it comes to acceptance, and no remorse for the ones that leave
You learn a lot about life when your friends start dying
You learn a lot about trust when you're left so lonely
Again, to no surprise
And I hate that I can see you when I look in my eyes
Alone again

Well who'd have guessed you'd do me so dirty?
Well God damn, am I really so selfish?
Am I so naive that I can't see my faults
But I would point out every one of yours

Everyone dies alone, you and everyone you know
Everyone dies alone, you and everyone you know