

Kill the Beast

Voltaire

Kill the beast! Kill the beast!

In my land, we had a feast
And we called it "Kill the Beast"
We made fears materialized
And cut them down to size
Gather 'round my goblin friends
As I tell you how the nightmare ends
Think of what you are most afraid
And join my black parade

Any monster, great or small, we have the power to defeat them all
The bigger they come, the harder they fall, they crash down, warts and all
(They come tumbling down)
If there's something eating thee, turn your fear into an effigy
March them through the town, burn them to the ground
Then you will be free
Kill the beast! Kill the beast!

This one's tongue is long and red
With antlers on its head
Scaly thighs and seven eyes
And teeth as sharp as knives
A snake for a tail and razor claws
Jutting out of his furry paws
A scary thing with big black wings
But he won't be here long

Any monster great or small, we have the power to defeat them all
The bigger they come, the harder they fall, they crash down warts and all
(They come tumbling down)
If there's something eating thee, march them into town, burn them to the ground
March them through the town, burn them to the ground
Then you will be free
Kill the beast! Kill the beast!

Listen up my goblin friends as I come to the end
I hope my tale will avail before my song has ceased
If you want to be like me and live monster-free
At the very least
Throw yourself a feast
And play "Kill the Beast"

Any monster great or small, we have the power to defeat them all
The bigger they come, the harder they fall, they crash down warts and all
If there's something eating thee, turn your fear into an effigy
March them through the town, burn them to the ground
Then you will be free
You'll be free like me
Kill the beast!
