

Forgotten Tale

Wild

[Narrator:]

Eight thousand years ago
When the Earth was just the playground of the Elders
When freedom was the goal because of human race challenged their fate

Forgotten stories talk about how Elders punished rebel ones All those who tried to take control of their (own) lives Searching deep into dignity, they found a new reason to be Expecting harder times, mankind prepared to strike

Then the war against Elders began Children saw their parents lying in the ground
Was too late to give up
Widows prayed for a miracle

[All:]

And they came from the sky
Riding white eagles brought justice,
While sunlight kills the night

[Narrator:]

Old tyrants fell down
A new age had borned with the rising sun

[Human:]

Now we can get out this cage we guide our lives once again
But this time the toll is too high
A lot of us died... They lie in the battlefield

[Angel:]

We're here by the grace of the gods
We've come to save you from the fall
Your race has been chosen to last Forget now your past... And rise in unity

[All:]

And they came from the sky
Riding white eagles brought justice,
While sunlight kills the night

[Narrator:]

Old tyrants fell down
A new age had borned with the rising sun

[Narrator:]

Blinded by the power
don't deserved the mercy of gods
They betrayed their principles to rule over them all

Selfishness and thirst for power destroyed their unity
Gods left mankind to their fate

[Human:]

Fading slowly into the black hole of our greediness
Maybe a fair destiny for our live in sin

[Narrator:]

This is just a forgotten tale
A story about the fault of human race
Intolerance and greediness, not stuff of nowadays
Are leading us all to decay
