

The Bedlam Overture

Wolverine

Silent screaming words
Offering our lives a way
A perfect smile for all to see
Lingers everywhere
Travels where horizons blend
A grand design to hold as true

Strangers gazing west
Faceless shadows on a screen
A distant comfort, silent cries
Death is just a word
Stripped from meaning long ago
All that's near we hold as dear

Love is their disease
Beyond a cure they gloat in sin
All the while they die
Color taints their mind
Their savage hearts for us to see
Our kinds roam different lands

Breathe... just breathe... close your eyes a while
Stillness lies buried within your own mind

(Air... Breathe... Life...)
(Air... Breathe... Life...)
She's drowning now, her life is swept away
(Air... Breathe... Life...)
(Air... Breathe... Life...)
All silent now, her body in decay

Take a moment now, time to make a choice
Past soon turns into a faded memory
We've gone too far, let go
See the weight of lunacy fall to the ground

Candle flames have turned into a raging fire
By winds put to words
Well of reasoning, calling for discovery
To flush sins of our deeds away...

Breathe... just breathe... close your eyes a while
Stillness lies buried within your own mind

Upon this hollow ground we need to start again
Bridge infernal depths, rebuild the realms we kept
Fight the urge to hide, find the vows that died

Upon this hollow ground we need to start again
Eyes upon the world beyond illusive screens
Now the blood red sky cries for reasons why
