

When The Night Comes

Wolverine

And you stare into a gloomy distance
Of a place you thought was ahead of you
But now the winding road seems never ending tonight...

You pray that the stars will light the way for you
When the night gets dark and the cold unknown
Comes your way to ensure your ending's tonight...

I'll be there, watching every move they make
I'll be there whispering words to ease your pain
All through the night...

When the night comes
And the coldness numbs your mind
All your deepest fears find you running motionless

When the night comes
And the nightmares come to life
All you drag behind slows you down trying, running
You'll die trying, running...

Coldness seeks to slow your every move
Trading secrets with your loneliness
Watchful rest, keep that fire burning tonight...

And though when it all just seems too much to bare
When the night is there and you're all alone
Your weariness can never be your mistress tonight...

The pain of leaving behind
(A pain that shall set you free)
And journey on through the wild
(Defying the cries of the night)
Defining trades of a life
(A lifetime to show)
As you scare off the darkness tonight...

I'll be there, watching every move they make
I'll be there whispering words to ease your pain
All through the night...

When the night comes
And the coldness numbs your mind
All your deepest fears find you running motionless

When the night comes
And the nightmares come to life
All you drag behind slows you down trying, running
You'll die trying, running away...

When the night comes
And coldness numbs your mind
I'll whisper words to keep you awake...

When the night comes to suffocate your fire
I'll be there watching, waiting...
To set you on your way...
