Yes

Answers never clear again this turning of the page This turning look away, there I took a left turning Before I came of age ${\sf Before}$ I came of age

But I agreed to let it out, I agreed to let it go
I agreed to turn around, I agreed to turn my face away

Danger is the most important fear you?ll ever know
The transporting of refugees, the silent night is cold
And all the time we looked around as we were never told

But we agreed to let it out, we agreed to let it go We agreed to turn our backs, we agreed to turn our face away, away

Thousands to the million sisters, grandmothers and more It?s not the feast we throw away, it?s the way we close the door Their silence deafens every sound, we try just to ignore To waste their future freedom, we?ll regret forever more

I believe in, I believe in, these are the days that we will talk abou $\ensuremath{\mathsf{t}}$

I believe in, I believe in, one understanding what is real If we are one then we are refugees We are the prisoners of our own design

If we are one, seen through the eyes of child We will perpetuate this song of love If we are one, seen through the eyes of child We will perpetuate this song, perpetuate this song of love

Now, we build the bridges that we walk upon together At the last count many lonely souls, the sadness always kills Each breaking point is waiting for the promise to fulfill

When we agree to turn the page, when we agree to help them free When we agree to let it out, when we agree to let it shine When we agree to let it run, when we agree to let it change our lives

I believe in, our lives, I believe in, these are the days we will tal k about

When we are one, seen through the eyes of child We will perpetuate this song of love When we are one, seen through the eyes of child We will perpetuate this song of love Perpetuate this song of love, yeah, yeah Perpetuate this song of love
