

To Say Goodbye, To Be Forgiven

Yonder Mountain String Band

Are you one foot in the grave, or one step closer to your Savior?

Brother, tell me how it feels, it's much too soon to meet your maker

You ain't ever walked the line, boy, you've always been a rebel
Ain't no time to strike a deal, not for someone who cheat the devil

Won't get a nickel for your name, course you won't need it where you're goin'

Brother, tell me, can you feel the winds of change have started blowin'?

It ain't a hot and dusty road, it's not a highway, it's a journey

Sure, you're walkin' for the train, but it's the train that's bound for glory

Every man is born to die, there ain't no mystery to livin'

But tell me brother, is it hard now to say goodbye, to be forgiven?

'Cause you won't ever get it back, can't you hear the angels callin'?

Brother, listen to them now, now that the tears have started fallin'

When He reaches out His hand for you, and you kneel before your Savior

Say, your brothers know you're gone, gone to Heaven a believer

Say, your brothers know you're gone, gone to Heaven a believer
